

Chickpea-Tuna Salad Lettuce Wraps

These Chickpea-Tuna Salad Lettuce Wraps give classic tuna salad a fresh, flavorful upgrade. Mashed chickpeas add creamy texture and extra protein, while Greek yogurt gives the salad a light, creamy base. A generous shake of everything bagel seasoning ties it all together with savory crunch. Wrapped in crisp butter lettuce instead of bread, it's a satisfying, high-protein lunch that's perfect for meal prep or a quick, no-cook dinner.

Ingredients

- 1 (15-ounce) can no-salt-added chickpeas, rinsed
- 2 (5-ounce) cans no-salt-added tuna in water, drained and flaked
- ½ cup whole-milk plain strained (Greek-style) yogurt
- 5 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 1 medium stalk celery, thinly sliced (about ⅓ cup)
- ⅓ cup chopped scallions
- ¼ cup rinsed drained capers
- 2½ tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons no-salt-added everything bagel seasoning
- ½ teaspoon ground pepper
- ¼ teaspoon plus ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 16 leaves butter lettuce (4 ounces; from 1 head)

Directions

Step 1

Place rinsed chickpeas in a large bowl. Mash with a fork until some are completely smooth but most remain chunky. Add flaked drained tuna; stir to combine.

Step 2

Add ½ cup yogurt, 5 tablespoons mayonnaise, the sliced celery, ⅓ cup scallions, ¼ cup capers, 2½ tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons everything bagel seasoning, ½ teaspoon pepper and ¼ teaspoon plus ⅛ teaspoon salt; mix until evenly combined.

Step 3

Divide the salad evenly among 16 lettuce leaves (about ¼ cup each), using about 3 to 4 leaves per serving.

To make ahead

Prepare salad through Step 2; refrigerate in an airtight container for up to 3 days.

Frequently Asked Questions

Do I have to use canned chickpeas?

No. You can cook up a batch from dried if you want, but canned chickpeas make this recipe quick and easy. If you plan to use dried chickpeas, keep in mind that you'll need about 1½ cups cooked for this recipe. Soak them overnight and then boil them the next day until they're nice and soft.

Can I make my own bagel seasoning?

Absolutely! You can create a no-salt bagel seasoning by mixing dehydrated onion and garlic with poppy seeds and sesame seeds.

Do I have to use lettuce wraps?

No. The chickpea filling would be delicious in lavash, wheat tortillas, pita or your favorite wrap, but of course, this will alter the nutritional profile and calories.

How should I store leftovers?

To keep the salad fresh, store it in an airtight container for up to 3 days. For the best results, wrap the lettuce in a damp paper towel, place it inside a bag and refrigerate it. The lettuce should also stay fresh for up to 3 days. If the salad becomes compact after chilling, you can loosen it by adding a splash of lemon juice or water.

What should I serve with Chickpea Tuna Salad Wraps?

We would serve the wraps with our healthy Tomato Soup recipe, which can be prepared in advance. Alternatively, pair it with a quick salad, such as our Cucumber, Tomato & Feta Salad, which takes just 10 minutes to prepare, or our Leafy Green Salad. Our Chipotle Coleslaw would also be a great option, along with a side of veggie sticks, fresh fruit, pickles or pita chips.
