

Raspberry-Shallot Vinaigrette

Sweet-tart raspberries pair with shallots and tangy champagne vinegar in this bright raspberry vinaigrette recipe. A touch of honey balances the acidity, making this dressing the perfect addition to salads, grain bowls or grilled vegetables.

Frequently Asked Questions

Can I make the dressing without a blender?

Absolutely! If you don't have a classic blender, a food processor or an immersion blender will work just as well. If none of these are available, you can vigorously whisk the dressing by hand.

Can I strain the seeds?

You can strain the seeds, but it's probably unnecessary since the blender will do a good job of pulverizing them. However, if you prefer to have no traces of seeds, you can strain the mixture through a fine-mesh sieve.

Can I thicken up the dressing more?

Yes, it's easy to adjust the thickness of the dressing to your desired consistency by adding more berries.

What foods pair well with this vinaigrette?

This sweet-tart vinaigrette is extremely versatile. It adds lots of flavor as well as a pretty red color to green salads, such as our Leafy Green Salad, Raspberry-Spinach Salad with Avocado & Walnuts and Strawberry & Kale Salad with Burrata. You can also use it over Sheet-Pan Roasted Vegetables or steamed vegetables. It pairs well with grain bowls, or you can simply drizzle it over quinoa or rice. Additionally, it works wonderfully as a marinade for grilled or roasted chicken, or you can serve it over chicken salad.

How should I store leftover dressing?

Store any leftover vinaigrette in an airtight container in the refrigerator for up to five days. A Mason jar works well. When you're ready to use it, let it come to room temperature and shake it well before serving.
